Collection and usage attributes

Guide for use:	The Australian Bureau of Statistics' Australian and New Zealand Standard Offence Classification (ANZSOC) provides a systematic ordering of criminal offences.
	The ANZSOC contains three levels: divisions (2-digit codes), subdivisions (3-digit codes) and groups (4-digit codes). The group level provides the most information. Where possible, the offence type should be recorded using the 4-digit group code.
	All offences for which a person is serving a legal order or arrangement should be recorded, not just the most serious offence.
