Collection and usage attributes

Computation description: The numerator:

- include records with the triage categories from 1 to 5.
- exclude records if the Waiting time to service is invalid.
 - Length of stay < 0.
 - Presentation date or time are missing.
 - Physical departure date or time is missing.

The 90th percentile (the ninetieth percentage value in a group of data arranged from lowest to highest value for time waited) represents the time within which 90% of patients were admitted and physically left the emergency department.

For example, if there were 100 observations admitted to the hospital, the 90th percentile will correspond to the average time for the 90th and 91st observations. If there were 101 observations, the 90th percentile will correspond to the time for the 91st observation.

Emergency department stay time is calculated by subtracting the date and time the patient presented to the emergency department from the date and time the patient physically left the emergency department.

Computation: Time in ED from arrival to departure (in hours and minutes) at 90th percentile for ED presentations with an episode end status of 1: Admitted or 102: Admitted LGH.

Numerator: The numerator:

- include records with the triage categories from 1 to 5.
- exclude records if the Waiting time to service is invalid.
 - Length of stay < 0.
 - Presentation date or time are missing.
 - Physical departure date or time is missing.
